Overview

Our rural communities are unique to Aotearoa New Zealand, are inherently resilient and unequivocally hold the economic, social and cultural strength of Aotearoa New Zealand in their hearts. Aotearoa New Zealand's history is populated by rural pioneers and entrepreneurs laced together with Te Ao Māori. Aotearoa New Zealand's rural communities are innovative, tight-knit and supportive. They value their heritage and contribution to our way of life which they hold dear and is the envy of many around the world. Rural women are the backbone of our rural communities and are vital to ensuring the communities in which they live, work, and play are strong and resilient. Rural women are leaders in their local communities. Government policies, legislation and decisions impact urban and rural communities differently.

About RWNZ

Rural Women New Zealand (RWNZ) is a not-for-profit, member-based organisation that since 1925 has been reaching into all rural communities and for nearly 100 years has been, and continues to be, a credible, respected voice on rural environment, health, education, technology, business and social issues.

RWNZ is affiliated to the Associated Country Women of the World and as such upholds all United Nations, ILO, FAO and WHO conventions and outcome statements as they relate to women and rural women in particular. RWNZ is a strong supporter of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and seeks acknowledgement of these in its submissions to Parliament.

Role of RWNZ

RRWNZ strives to ensure that all rural residents, workers and families have equitable access to services, inequalities are addressed by Government, and the wellbeing of rural communities is considered from the beginning of all policy and legislative development. Our Members play a vital role as leaders in their communities and as decision-makers at local, national and international level.

Engaging With our Rural Voice

Change begins when a community comes together to discuss issues that affect it. When given the opportunity, this togetherness allows rural communities to discuss the effects of government policy and legislation on those living and working in rural New Zealand. Rural voices must be included in consultation and policy development to ensure positive outcomes for rural communities.

Policy Development

RWNZ sees an opportunity for the Minister to ensure that all policy development includes a rural impact analysis alongside the Ministry's gender analysis tool. It is important to identify and mitigate any potential adverse impacts of the intersectionality of gender and rural living.

Currently there are guidelines for rural proofing at the Ministry of Primary Industries which support basic rural impact analyses and the Ministry for Women has the gender analysis tool, Bringing Gender In. Using these together should give the desired platform, in the creation of policies and plans, for testing any issues that result from the intersectionality of being a woman, or girl, in rural New Zealand.

Consultation

RWNZ further recommends that the Minister encourages consultation and communication with rural communities to ensure effective participation and analysis.

Consultation can be achieved through the use of such mechanisms as focus groups, surveys and newsletters which are hosted and/or distributed by rural interest groups such as ours.

Leadership

RWNZ sees an opportunity for the Minister to partner with us to identify and encourage rural women to represent their communities on District Health Boards, advisory committees, reference groups and taskforces to ensure the voice of rural communities and the health issues facing women are understood and articulated.

International Instruments

RWNZ would like to see the Government action the United Nations Human Rights Instruments, which have been ratified by Aotearoa New Zealand, as they relate to rural women and girls, in particular the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW); the outcome statement of the 62nd United Nations Commission on the Status of Women (CSW62); the Beijing Platform for Action and; the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

The Minister could advocate for actions across Government that include accepting and implementing any General Recommendations and State Party Specific Recommendations to Aotearoa New Zealand by the CEDAW Committee and any health outcome statements from CSW62.

Priority Areas:

The inconsistent quality and irregular maintenance of rural roads combined with speed, poor signage and a diverse range of road users leads to serious injuries and fatalities in rural communities. Speed on rural roads, particularly near rural schools and on school bus routes, endangers rural children.

Threats to personal security are increasing in rural New Zealand and isolation is an impediment to seeking and receiving urgent help when it is needed. More rural women experience family violence than their urban sisters and access to help and support is often hours away.

New Zealanders working and living in rural communities have the right to work and live in safe environments. Rural communities suffer high rates of injury and death amongst their workforces and families.

Recommendations for Minister

- Work with agencies including local government to improve the quality, maintenance and safety of rural roads through increased funding, driver education and effective road signage;
- Work with local government authorities to ensure that there are slower speed limits in rural school zones and 20kph limit while passing stationary school buses;

- Fully resource agencies and communities to reduce violence against women and children including the provision of safe houses and support close to rural communities;

- Increase policing in rural areas;

- Collaborate with rural communities and agencies tasked with keeping New Zealanders safe to improve workplace safety and ensure that management of hazards and incidents leads to a reduction in serious injury and death.

First 100 days

The strategic intentions articulated in the first one hundred days of government are vital to the ongoing success of Aotearoa New Zealand and the transformational leadership needed to lead these intentions should be obvious to all New Zealanders. The economic, environmental, social and cultural strength of the nation is at its most vulnerable as a new Government settles in to its place and we look forward to hearing of the central role rural communities will be playing in those strategic intentions and leadership of Aotearoa New Zealand.

Rural Women New Zealand welcomes the opportunity to meet with you in these first one hundred days to discuss opportunities for collaboration and we look forward to hearing from your office to that end.
